The PERFECT Chewing Tobacco

Eradication Of Tuberculosis

Great forward strides have been made in the fight to stem the toll of human life taken by tuberculosis in the prairie provinces in the past few years but there are evidences that complete victory has not yet been won. There is more work yet to be done before this enemy of mankind can be said to have been totally routed.

As most residents of that province are aware, tuberculosis in Saskatchewan was some years ago brought virtually within the category of State Medicine when the sanatoria were placed under the administration of the Saskatchewan Anti-Tuberculosis League, with authority given the League to impose an annual tax levy on all municipalities, rural and urban, which, supported by government grants, furnishes the finances for treatment of all cases of the disease found within the province. In addition, it should be added, the funds for supplementary preventive work are secured from voluntary contributions realized by the sale of Christmas seals.

While not quite patterned on the Saskatchewan system, the fight against the disease in Manitoba is waged along somewhat similar lines and at the time of writing the Alberta Legislature has a bill before it which will virtually place the war against T. B. in that province within the State Medicine plane, if adopted.

As a result of the work done in Saskatchewan during the past decade, that province can boast, and with justification, that it is in the van of the fight and has to-day the lowest death rate from tuberculosis of any province in the Dominion, 30 per 1,000 deaths for last year.

Facts and figures show that, partly as a result of the preventive work, the incidence of the disease in Saskatchewan has passed the peak, that the former upward curve of the number of cases treated annually is now trending in a downward direction and that, as a further result, space in hospitals which have had to care for an overflow for which provision could not be made in the sanatoria, is no longer required for T.B. cases. An additional result is that patients in the sanatoria can be held there for treatment longer than was formerly possible, thus improving their chances of complete recovery.

While this is all to the good, there yet remain two real hazards to be definitely eradicated. These are the menace afforded by the Indian and the cow.

In the early days when the Indians roamed the prairies and lived in the open tuberculosis was practically unknown among them. It was not until they were taught to adopt the habits of the whites and confine themselves in permanent homes that they became subject to tuberculosis. Since that time the disease has become rampant among the aborigines and is taking heavy toll. In other words, the "whites" presented the Indians with tuberculosis and to-day the Indians are returning the compliment by infecting the whites with whom they come in frequent contact.

Figures were recently quoted showing that the incidence of tuberculosis among the Indian population of the prairie provinces is ten times as great as among the white inhabitants and it appears that very little at present is being done to cope with the menace.

The Indians are the wards of the Federal government and this is a situation which should receive the immediate attention of the authorities at Ottawa, if the efforts of the provincial governments in reducing the disease among the other residents of the provinces are not to be at least partially negated.

The other danger spot in the situation is the prevalence of bovine tuberculosis among cattle. While much has been done to reduce this disease among the cattle of the prairie provinces and to minimize the risk of infection from cattle to human beings via the milk route, there is still danger of infection from this source and will continue to be until it has been entirely stamped out of the herds.

Eradication will not be complete until such time as compulsory inspection of cattle for bovine tuberculosis and slaughter of all reactors in the entire zone of the three provinces is in effect, but this consumption cannot be achieved until there is a sufficiently strong public demand for it.

Until that time farmers and residents of the smaller towns and villages outside of the T.B. free zones are subject to risk of contagion by milk from cattle suffering from bovine tuberculosis. This risk, however, could be materially minimized if farmers and others owning milk cattle would in the meantime, have their cattle tested at their own expense and slaughter reactors. By so doing, they can at least afford protection for their own families and their customers.

It is true that such action might result in some immediate financial loss to cattle owners who take this precaution, but it might be less expensive in the long run to continue to take chances of infection from that source.

May Move Woolwich Arsenal

Vulnerability Of London To Air Attacks Is Reason Given

New emphasis on the vulnerability of London to air attack is found in reports that the governments is seriously considering moving sections of Woolwich arsenal to more remote places in the British Isles.

Talk of its removal has given the alarmists new occasion to paint a picture of gas, incendiary and explosive bombs, raining down upon the city—a city which already knows, from experience, of the terror of air raids.

It has provided proponents of a stronger air defence with new arguments in their claims that London, with its 8,000,000 inhabitants, and easily accessible from the continent, is not protected against the bombing plane.

Winston Churchill likened London to a "great fat cow which would soon be at the mercy of the nearest foraging dictator."

Public concern is likewise being fanned by current discussion in the press and in parliament as to the ability of the navy to defend itself against air attack. Countering this, however, there is the expansion, both real and indicated, of the Royal Air Force; the development of air defence; the hitherto discovery of anti-aircraft weapons which would keep invaders at bay, despite the fact London is but a matter of minutes from the continent by air.

Those who want the Woolwich arsenal moved claim it has so far been the "fatally weak spot" in every defence plan yet devised for London. No way has been found, it is stated, of protecting the arsenal and rendering it immune from attack from the skies.

King's Birthday

His Majesty Will Ride At Head Of His Troops On Anniversary

King Edward will ride at the head of his troops for the first time as sovereign when he celebrates his 42nd birthday, June 23.

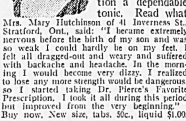

It was officially announced His Majesty's birthday will be celebrated in London and at all stations of the royal navy, the army and the royal air force at home and abroad.

The principal function will be the trooping of the colors on the Horse Guards' parade. This will be a ceremony many always observed by the late King George, and on his last birthday, June 3, His late Majesty rode with his four sons in the picturesque ceremonial.

His Majesty's ships will be dressed over for the occasion, and royal salutes of 21 guns will be fired at certain stations. Land forces will hold ceremonial parades.

I felt all dragged-out and weary and suffered with backache and headache. In the morning I would become very dizzy. I refused to lose any more strength would be dangerous. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I took it all during this period but improved from the very beginning. Buy more. New size, 50c. 50c. liquid 50c.

After Clinical Tests

Bacteriologist Is Convinced Leprosy Not Contagious Disease

Efforts to keep alive the causative organism of leprosy have virtually established the fact that the disease is not contagious. This is the conclusion of Dr. A. J. Salte, assistant professor of bacteriology at the University of California. Taking as a basis for his work clinical tests that had been made at the Kailli Leprosy hospital, on the outskirts of Honolulu, Dr. Salte successfully checked them for six months at the Federal lepro-sarium at Carville, La.

Testing Television System

British Broadcasting Company To Stage Program Very Soon

The world's first government-controlled television programs will be broadcast very soon when the British Broadcasting Company stages "hear-and-see" tests from Alexandra Palace.

Plans already are afoot to "televise" King Edward VIII. next Christmas Day when he goes before the microphone to extend his Christmas greetings to the empire. If this royal innovation is successful the King's coronation—probably in May or June of next year—will be televised from Westminster Abbey in all its centuries-old pomp and splendor. Converting of Alexandra Palace, an ornate remnant of Victorian days atop a hill in North London, into a television station is being rushed, and postoffice engineers are laying the television cable, connecting London and Birmingham. The cable costs $5,000 a mile, but when completed will carry a load of 200 separate telephone conversations when not in television use.

Birmingham, probably will be the site of the next station. It would be able to take some of its programs by the land-line cable from Alexandra Palace, which in turn can be connected with the B.B.C. Broadcasting House six miles away in the heart of London and thence to "outside relay points" such as Westminster Abbey.

The only hitch is that few Britons will have television sets when the first "televized" broadcasts are made. They'll have to go to a theatre or public hall. Manufacturers, although they say they have perfected moderately priced receiving outfits, cannot place them on the market with any guarantee of good reception until they have had an opportunity of cutting them in on regular transmissions from Alexandra Palace. This will take two or three months after the first tests.

Broadcasting officials and equipment manufacturers say that "looking in" will be established in England by next winter and that receiving sets will be sold at from $85 to $350.

Concession To Indians

May Carry On With Potlatch Ceremony In British Columbia

Indians of the Alert Bay district in British Columbia were given another chance by the House of Commons to practice their ancient potlatch, once a regular orgy but now a more or less harmless ceremony dating back through the ages.

The potlatch has been dying out in recent years and is limited to Indians of the Kwakwaka'wakw agency on the Pacific coast who have refused to observe laws outlawing it. It is a sort of generosity spree in its present-day form. Indians collect all sorts of things, food, blankets or household utensils, call in their friends and give everything away. They have been known to impoverish themselves for years.

The Indian act provides jail sentences for Indians practicing the potlatch, but the Alert tribe had disregarded it. Indian Minister Clegg proposed a bill in the house making the laws still more stringent. It received second reading but he dropped the anti-potlatch clauses in committee stage after A. W. Neil (Ind., Comox-Alberni) led a strenuous opposition to it.

The bill decided to permit the evolutionary influences of education, which have stamped it out almost, to continue to combat it.

Air Conditioned Trains

C.N.R. Lines To Adopt This Innovation During 1936

Air-conditioning of principal lines of the Canadian National Railways system will be undertaken during 1936, according to the annual report tabled in the House of Commons. While the board of trustees declared there was no economic justification for any wholesale replacement of equipment, nor were there financial resources available for such a program, the air-conditioning of main passenger trains was a necessity.

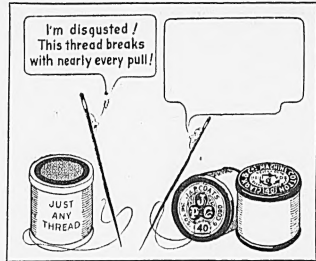

During the year 1935 authority was given for the retirement of 16,912 units of obsolete equipment involving a charge against profit and loss account of $23,228,857. At the same time orders were placed for 100 gondola cars essential to traffic requirements on the Grand Trunk western.

Peeled peaches will discolor unless handled rapidly. It is asserted by canners that this discoloration can be removed by blanching the fruit a few minutes in boiling water.

Advice From Chicago

Two Women Cabled League Delegates To Exercise Calmness

Just before the session of the League of Nations' council was to start on March 17 a messenger boy pedalled up to St. James' Palace bearing 14 urgent cablegrams, one to the head of each delegation.

They were from two Chicago women urging the delegates to exercise the calmest and most thoughtful statesmanship while dealing with the ticklish situation.

Harness 80 Years Old Is Still Being Used

Some kind of record may be claimed for a set of harness in almost daily use in the Orkney district of Saskatchewan. The harness is said to be around 80 years in use, having come to the United States in 1870 and found its way via Minnesota to Saskatchewan. Formerly used to decorate thoroughbred stallions and mares, it is now used on ponies which draw children to school.

And How Much is One Million Dollars Worth?

Would you risk your life and the health of your children for a million dollars?

Six mothers in Canada are taking that risk. They are competing for the fortune which the eccentric Charles Vance Millar bequeathed to the Toronto mother who produces the most children living or dead, in the ten years following his death. The time is up October 31 of this year.

Pictorial Review sent a special writer, Sylvia Grace, to Toronto to interview the mothers. This is how the race lines up, she reports: Mrs. Mathew Kenny is ahead with six children living, five dead, one expected; Mrs. Stefano Darrigo, six children living, three dead, one expected; Mrs. John Nagle, eight children living, one dead; Mrs. Gus Graziano, seven children living, one dead, one expected; Mrs. Ambrose Harrison, eight children living.

Four of the six families are on relief. In only one family are all the children alive and at home. In that family there is not enough of anything for so many people, not enough time, or food, or space, or clothes.

"I'm not good for much, just work that's about all," says Mrs. Bagnato, mother of twenty-three children, who has found time somehow to make a career as a court interpreter.

"We got to get that money, we got to, you see that," says Mr. Darrigo, father of sixteen children.

"Times are going to be better," says Mrs. Nagle, looking anxiously at her brood of ten. "If we should get the money, we'd buy a fruit farm."

"Work is what I like," says Mrs. Kenny. She has had plenty of practice. She started to earn her living when she was eight. Now she has fifteen children and her husband has been on relief for years.

"The fathers and mothers see that million dollars like a mirage in the desert," Miss Grace concludes. "Each mother believes she will win, and the five who do not will believe as long as they live that they were cheated."

Poet's Comment On Social Credit

AN ABERHART BOOSTER

The day is dawning bright and clear
Across the eastern sky
Because a man called Aberhart
Was born to rule or die.
He told us of a system
That to all would bring good cheer,
And now we're settled down to work
And make that system clear.
It takes a man of courage
His critics to ignore
For Duggan and Bill Howson
Are always on the floor.
They tell him what he ought to do
And what he must not dare,
And that the B.N.A. Act
Is in need of repair.
Now Howson would our chief recall
His party to defend
And turn us back a hundred year
And spoil our dividends.
But if he sits right down to think
He'll find the scheme quite fair
And not another man 'round here
Could fill the Premier's chair.
All eyes are on this province east,
From countries far and near,
But if we stand by Aberhart
We're sure of that good cheer.
No other man has dared to stan
On such a restless sea,
But if we give a helping hand
'Twill lead to Victory.
Alberta is now getting wise
And won't be fooled of yore
Until our good friend Aberhart
Cries quits and says no more.
There's Duggan and there's Howson.
Two opponents, give no rest,
But think up foolish chatter
To publish in the press.
There's Manning and there's Tanne
There's Wright and Foster too,
There's Hanson and there's Hart-
To force their measures through.
Here's Morrison and there's Taylor
And smiling Solon Low.
With men like these to rule our lan-
Depression's got to go.
Now Douglas he did cast a glim
Across the darkening sky,
Is it weal or is it woe
Or is it doomed to die?
And when he to this land return
His logic to proclaim
He will be waver in the test
Or will he staunch remain?
Ay, will our banners half mast be
Or top the bending spars
No flout a message to our friend
Across the silvery bars.
Now let us all our strength unite
And put this scheme afloat
Or if we don't its plain to see
Our prospects will be lost.

SCHOOL FAIR CARD PARTY AND DANCE HELD

The Card Party and Dance put on by the School Fair Association in Chinook School on Friday, March 27th, was very well attended considering the condition of the roads and weather. Every one present had a very enjoyable time.

Prizes for Bridge were as follows: Ladies' First—Mrs. A. Gingles, Consolation: Mrs. Mortimer. Men's First—G. Gillette, Consolation: Harold Stewart.

Bridge was followed by a novelty dance. The dances being named after the school fair directors and members of the school board, caused a lot of mirth. The elimination dance was won by Mr and Mrs. Youell and the spot dance by Miss Baker and A. Osterud.

MAKING HEADWAY

Some progress is being made in the difficult task of getting Canada's wheat surplus in the channels of consumption, says the Winnipeg Free Press. There is, of course, nothing in the nature of a picnic in the business of selling wheat competitively, it adds. There is always pressure on the market from some country anxious to get rid of its wheat even at a sacrifice. Argentina having retired for the time being from this role, its place has been taken by Australia which is vigorously pressing its wheat on the European markets. Nevertheless Canadian wheat is moving out satisfactorily, it concludes, and with increasing momentum into the markets of the world.

It is said that whooping cough is the most contagious of all child diseases.

The sum of $7.50 was realized the dance committee take this opportunity to thank all those who so willingly helped to make the evening a success.

STARTING AN ALFALFA FIELD

(Lethbridge Experimental Station)

The scarcity of hay that developed during the recent cold spell brings forcibly to our attention the fact that we have reached the point in southern Alberta where we have practically no surplus feed for any emergency condition. This means that the demands of the rancher, together with the winter feeding operations developed in recent years, have caught up with the alfalfa production on your irrigated lands. It, therefore, appears that the time has arrived when it is well to consider a definite increase in our alfalfa acreage and as alfalfa seed is comparatively moderate in price at present this spring would seem to be an opportune time for seeding more alfalfa.

Most of the alfalfa in southern Alberta will, of course be raised on the irrigated lands, but it may be advisable for farmers especially ranchers in the foothills area, where moisture is more plentiful, to consider the possibility of growing a little more alfalfa for their own use, although extra years when very little hay will be raised on the dry land even in the foothills, yet most seasons at least one fair cutting can be harvested.

Much has been learned in the past 35 years regarding the seeding of alfalfa in this district. In the past some have recommended seeding on well-prepared fallow or others on ploughed lands, but repeated experiments at the Lethbridge Experimental Station have shown that the best practice is to drill alfalfa directly into the stubble without any previous preparation and of course without a nurse crop. This applies to seeding both on dry and irrigated lands. It is not necessary to select the cleanest land as alfalfa can be started on weedy fields and will act as an ideal weed eradicator. This is especially true on irrigated land. At the Experimental Station we always select our weedless fields to seed down to alfalfa and by the second year even Canada thistles are super seeded by the alfalfa. Where alfalfa is seeded on irrigated land infested with Canada thistle, it is essential that the first irrigation be given very early, usually when the young alfalfa plants are not more than an inch to an inch and a half high. This is overlooked too often, as the Canada thistle plants which have their deep roots well established do not show signs of the soil becoming dry, and before the farmer is aware of it the top foot or two of the soil is dried out and the alfalfa seedlings are killed. This has caused many farmers to conclude that they cannot establish alfalfa in a field of Canada thistle.

The practice at this Station is to sow from 10 to 12 pounds of seed directly into unprepared stubble as previously suggested. We try to sow the seed as shallow as possible but still have it out of sight which is perhaps one-half inch deep, but never permit the seed to be put in deeper than one and one-half inches. By being careful as to the depth of seeding, we seldom fail to get a good stand. If for any reason, however, a good stand is not secured the first year it is possible to reseed the second spring at which time the field is carefully inspected and if the stand secured is not all that could be desired, another seeding of about 5 pounds per acre is made.

Where alfalfa is planted on weedy land, either under irrigation or without irrigation, the field will need to be mowed the first season at least once, and in some cases the second time, but usually it can be left undisturbed until the volunteer grain weeds and young alfalfa grow high enough to give a light hay crop.

We believe that farmers, both on dry and irrigated land, can be quite successful in obtaining a stand very much thicker and more satisfactory than is generally customary if they will follow out the suggestions made in this letter.
